Título da ação:

“Turn down for what?” – Music for a New Generation of Learners.

Sinopse:

*“Where words fail, music speaks.”
— Hans Christian Andersen*

Music has unquestionably become an intrinsic ally of English Language Teaching. Its motivational effects are undeniable and whether you're preparing a grammar/lexical centered lesson, or aiming to promote intercultural awareness, there seems to be a song for every situation. This workshop aims to present songs from a new generation of artists to tackle common ELT topics.

The first part of the session will focus on Michael Rost & JJ Wilson's recent research regarding Active Listening (2013). The second part will present numerous practical examples and tips on how to prepare these activities for the classroom and how to link listening with speaking, writing and reading skills and the curriculum.
