GOWER, Roger - 79

Longman Group Ltd

Lecture

Now or Never? Activity Sequencing in the Literature Class

In a literature class there is usually too much to do and too little time to do it. How can we make our classes more interesting and lively when our students have to explore the life and times of an author and read a difficult text in a foreign language? This session aims to focus on the lesson planning stage. What are the vital ingredients for a successful lesson? What order should they go in?

6ª Feira - 11:00/12:00 - Ginásio - Main Hall

GREEN, Monica Jayne - 57

International House, Torres Vedras

Talk/Demonstration

Creative use of the Blackboard

Practical ideas (some new, some not so new) for maximising the effectiveness of the blackboard as a means of presentation, a "noticeboard", a vocabulary resource, a change of focus and a practical alternative to the photocopier.

HILL, Jimmie - 9

Language Teaching Publications

Lecture

Organized Learning from Organized Teachers

Grammar, phrasal verbs, vocabulary: all areas of English learning will be more efficient if we teach students how to organize their learning. I shall outline practical ideas in all these areas. Particularly relevant to students preparing for examinations.

6ª Feira - 13:00/14:00 - Ginásio - Main Hall

HILL, Jimmie - 10

Language Teaching Publications

Lecture

Grammar or Vocabulary - which is more important?

There are many arguments for teaching, explaining and practising grammar in class. Vocabulary is more difficult to organize and teach in a systematic way. However, many grammar mistakes stem from a lack of vocabulary.

Sab 10:00 - 11:00 Ginásio - Main Hall

HILL, Jimmie - 11

Language Teaching Publications

Commercial workshop

Business English for low-level students

It is a common misconception that low-level students of business English have to improve their level of general English first before doing business English. It is possible to devise an approach with materials and improve their general English at the same time.

6ª Feira - 10:00/11:00 - S5

HOUGHTON, Andrew - 65

British Council, Porto

Talk/Demonstration

Structural Feedback in the Classroom

Using structural feedback allows the teacher and students to share their classroom experiences in a non-judgemental way. This session will explore various techniques which enable the teacher to use feedback in the classroom.

6ª Feira - 17:30/19:00 - S1

HOUGHTON, Andrew - 71

British Council, Porto

Talk/Demonstration

What's in it for me?

Students don't always feel the need to take part in classroom activities. This session looks at ways in which students can become personally involved. Looking at the four skills, we will show examples of activities which can give students opportunities for meaningful participation.

6ª Feira - 13:00/14:30 - S1

MIDDLEMISS, Annie - 80
Penguin Books

Talk/Demonstration
Encouraging Extensive Reading
The attitude to extensive reading has frequently been to give students a title and tell them to get on with it. What is needed, if students are to enjoy the benefit from their reading as a recreational, cultural and educational part of their learning experience, is a teaching methodology for extensive reading texts. Practical examples will be given and ideas discussed.
6<sup>a</sup> Feira - 10:00/11:00 - S14

MIDDLEMISS, Annie - 81
Penguin Books

Talk/Demonstration
Linking Language work with the Primary Curriculum
How can Meg and Mog, Spot, a snowman, a very hungry caterpillar and other well-known characters from children's literature develop language skills and consolidate learning across the curriculum? We will look at practical ideas and suggestions taken from "The Storytelling Handbook for Primary Teachers".
6<sup>a</sup> Feira - 14:00/15:00 - S9

NAPOLEON, Linda - 54
Cassell Publisher

Talk/Demonstration
From Developing Skills to Developing Students
The more we learn about learning, the more we appreciate that each individual has his or her own learning strategy. Current materials are beginning to integrate different learning approaches: inductive, deductive, pair and group work, communicative activities, self access as well as specific methodology such as TPR (Total Physical Response) and suggestopedia. Teachers are quickly learning the value of using materials that relate to their students in an effort to develop them as whole people rather than simply improving their foreign language skills.

NORRISH, John - 93
British Council

Lecture
Mind the Gap - some thoughts on awareness raising in Portuguese ELT classrooms.
This paper seeks to address the issue of bridging the almost inevitable gap which develops as teachers leave their formative work, training etc behind them and become immersed in the day-to-day details of teaching. 'INSET' (In-Service Education for Teachers) is a luxury relatively few can afford. Drawing on my experience of teaching, teacher education and discussions with Portuguese teachers, I hope to develop the idea of 'teacher as researcher'. Following work in this area in the University of East Anglia, I shall discuss various ways in which teachers can, by themselves, develop a more acute awareness of the possibilities of change within their classrooms, leading to more enjoyable and productive experiences for both teachers and taught.

Sexta-feira 13.00-14.30 S1

TOSTE, Verri 72
British Council, Porto

Talk/Demonstration/Workshop

Project Work

Project work motivates students to use English authentically. It gives them opportunity to more fully participate in the language classroom. But does it teach anything? Does it fit into the syllabus? How does the teacher plan a project? How does a teacher assess the results? We will answer these questions based on our practical classroom experience

Sábado 9.00-10.30 S1

WEINRICH, Linda Mary 14
Faculdade de Letras, Universidade do Porto

Talk/Demonstration

Sentence first, verdict afterwards

Judgment of students' competence should involve not only what they have done right and wrong, but also what they have attempted to do.

An incorrect sentence might merit a verdict of "justifiable homicide" of the rules rather than of "first degree murder" - and the punishment should fit the crime.

Quinta-feira 17.30-18.30 S10

WILLENS, Gérard M. 6
Centre for International Education, Hogeschool Gelderland

Talk/Demonstration

Culture and language; towards better communication in Europe.

The European dimension in foreign language teaching does not consist of the mere fact that they are taught. However important it is to be able to manipulate the forms of the foreign language, this ability in itself does not suffice for successful communication with speakers of that language. Somebody's communicative competence, as part of his knowledge system, is part of the culture he shares with those he shares this language with as a mother-tongue. If foreign language teaching is to make a solid contribution to the unification of Europe it will therefore have to develop a more explicit cross-cultural content and methodology.
